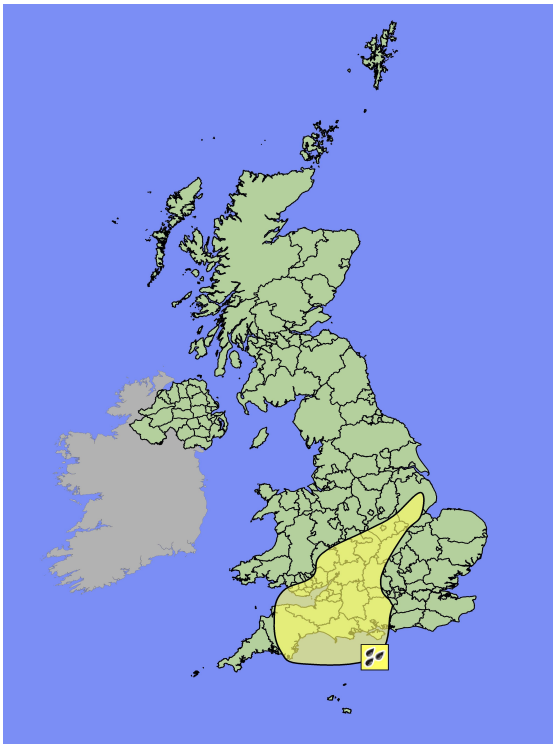
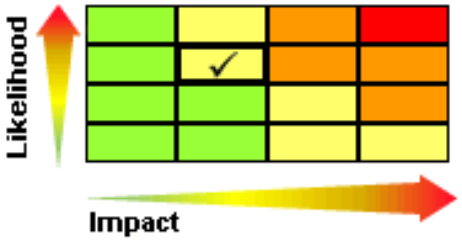
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
An active wave depression is expected to move northeast across the area early on Wednesday. Although there remains some uncertainty about the details of this development it is likely to bring 20-40 mm quite widely across the area with perhaps as much as 50 mm in places. As the ground remains saturated over much of the area following Tuesday's rain, localised flooding is a possibility.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 00:05 on Wed, 21st Nov 2012 until 13:00 on Wed, 21st Nov 2012

Following Tuesday's rain, a spell of heavy and persistent rain is likely to cross parts of southern, southwest and central England along with southeast Wales during the first half of Wednesday. The rain should gradually ease from the west during the morning.

The public should be be aware of the possibility of localised flooding and possible disruption to transport.

This warning has been extended to cover parts of the northeast Midlands and Lincolnshire.
